Learner-Centred Principles for Teaching in Higher Education

The following principles have been adapted from Chickering and Gamson’s (1987) seven principles for good practice in undergraduate education, Ramsden’s (2003) thirteen principles for effective university teaching; Weimer’s (2013) five key changes to practice for learner-centred teaching, and Lizzio et al.’s (2002) conceptual model for an effective academic environment.

1. Actively Engage Learners: ensure learning material is stimulating, relevant and interesting; explain material clearly; use a variety of methods that encourage active and deep approaches to learning, as well as adapt to evolving classroom contexts.

2. Demonstrate Passion, Empathy and Respect: show interest in students’ opinions and concerns; seek to understand their diverse talents, needs, prior knowledge, and approaches to learning; encourage interaction between instructor and students; share your love of the discipline.

3. Communicate Clear Expectations: make clear the intended learning outcomes and standards for performance; provide organization, structure and direction for where the course is going.

4. Encourage Student Independence: provide opportunities to develop and draw upon personal interests; offer choice in learning processes and modes of assessment; provide timely and developmental feedback on learning; encourage metacognition to promote self-assessment of learning.

5. Create a Teaching and Learning Community: use teaching methods and learning strategies that encourage mutual learning, as well as thoughtful, respectful and collaborative engagement and dialogue between all members of the classroom community.

6. Use Appropriate Assessment Methods: clearly align assessment methods with intended course outcomes; provide clear criteria for evaluation; emphasize deep learning; scaffold assessments to ensure progressive learning.

7. Commit to continuous improvement: gather formative and summative feedback on your teaching; practice critical self-reflection; consult scholarly literature on teaching & learning; engage in meaningful conversations with colleagues; identify clear goals for strengthening your teaching practice.

DEVELOPING YOUR PHILOSOPHY STATEMENT for the TEACHING AWARD DOSSIER: WORKSHEET

1. What does it mean to be a good teacher, educational leader or staff member in a university context? What does this mean in my particular discipline?

2. Who or what has most informed my beliefs about teaching and learning or my practices in my discipline?

3. What strategies do I use in my role? What do these say about my beliefs?

4. What 2-3 key beliefs do I hold about my practice and how it relates to student learning? What matters most to me?

Sources of evidence

For all data presented

Include a brief reflection and analysis to put these data in context.

- What themes do you see?
- What do these data say about your strengths and future areas for growth?
- What have you learned from these data?
- How do these data and comments connect to your philosophy and practices?
- How will you continue to grow and develop in your role based on these data? What actions will you take to grow and improve?

<td>Weekly on-line reflective learning journals One-page reflective summaries for course projects and papers</td>
<td>Assignment description for online-reflective learning journals Student course evaluation comments related to the development of their ability for critical reflection Exemplary student submissions</td>
<td>Reflective assignments directly align with my core belief of the importance of critical reflection to learning. In course evaluations, students have commented on the value of these assignments, in creating a sense of relevance to the course material, and communicating how they will use these learnings in their future academic and professional practices. It also streamlined my ability to provide directed feedback on their course projects and papers. Based on student feedback and workload, these assignments could be reduced in number. I will continue to explore other ways to incorporate critical reflection into student learning experiences, and will reduce the number of online journal submissions in future course offerings.</td>
<td>Challenging learners to develop their critical thinking.</td>
